ECHOES

Bicentennial Edition

1976

Two hundred years ago, a country was born. Like the autumn leaves that surrender to time, the first 200 years exit in a glorious and brilliant display of color, a celebration of life.

The rose, a symbol of rebirth, signifies the beginning of the next 200 years. Life blossoms anew, in itself a celebration.

The death of the leaves and the bloom of the rose symbolize nature's change; the death of old aspirations and the bloom of new ideals symbolize society's change. We can be the slaves of change or the creators of it—but its inevitability is certain.

The Editors, 1976.

Maintaining New Trier's unique learning experience—its wide assortment of programs and opportunities—became a frustrating, worrisome responsibility for the administration, community, and faculty. In the midst of runaway inflation, unfavorable state legislation denied the community its traditional role of strong support for the school system through tax referendum.

According to Principal Ralph McGee, "The school is striving to maintain all programs as fully as possible." But, he warned, "We can only adjust until we reach a certain point where quality will diminish all across the board." To date, the greatest tangible ramifications have been increases in size in freshman adviser rooms and some classes. In addition to these hardships, the faculty was forced to cope with fewer class concessions for student activities.

McGee forecasted that "although next year's seniors won't feel the impact of the situation appreciably, this year's freshmen and those to come will definitely be affected." Yet, anticipating corrective legislation in the near future, he felt that "the crisis won't be enough to diminish the quality of education at New Trier in the long run." However, McGee warned that if this corrective legislation is not passed, the program offerings will eventually have to be altered significantly with serious educational implications.

Recipe for: ENTERTAINMENT
Ingredients:
1 car (filled with gasoline)
1 or more friends
1 set of directions
1 wallet (preferably full of money)
½ cup of frustration
and some good old-fashioned high spirits
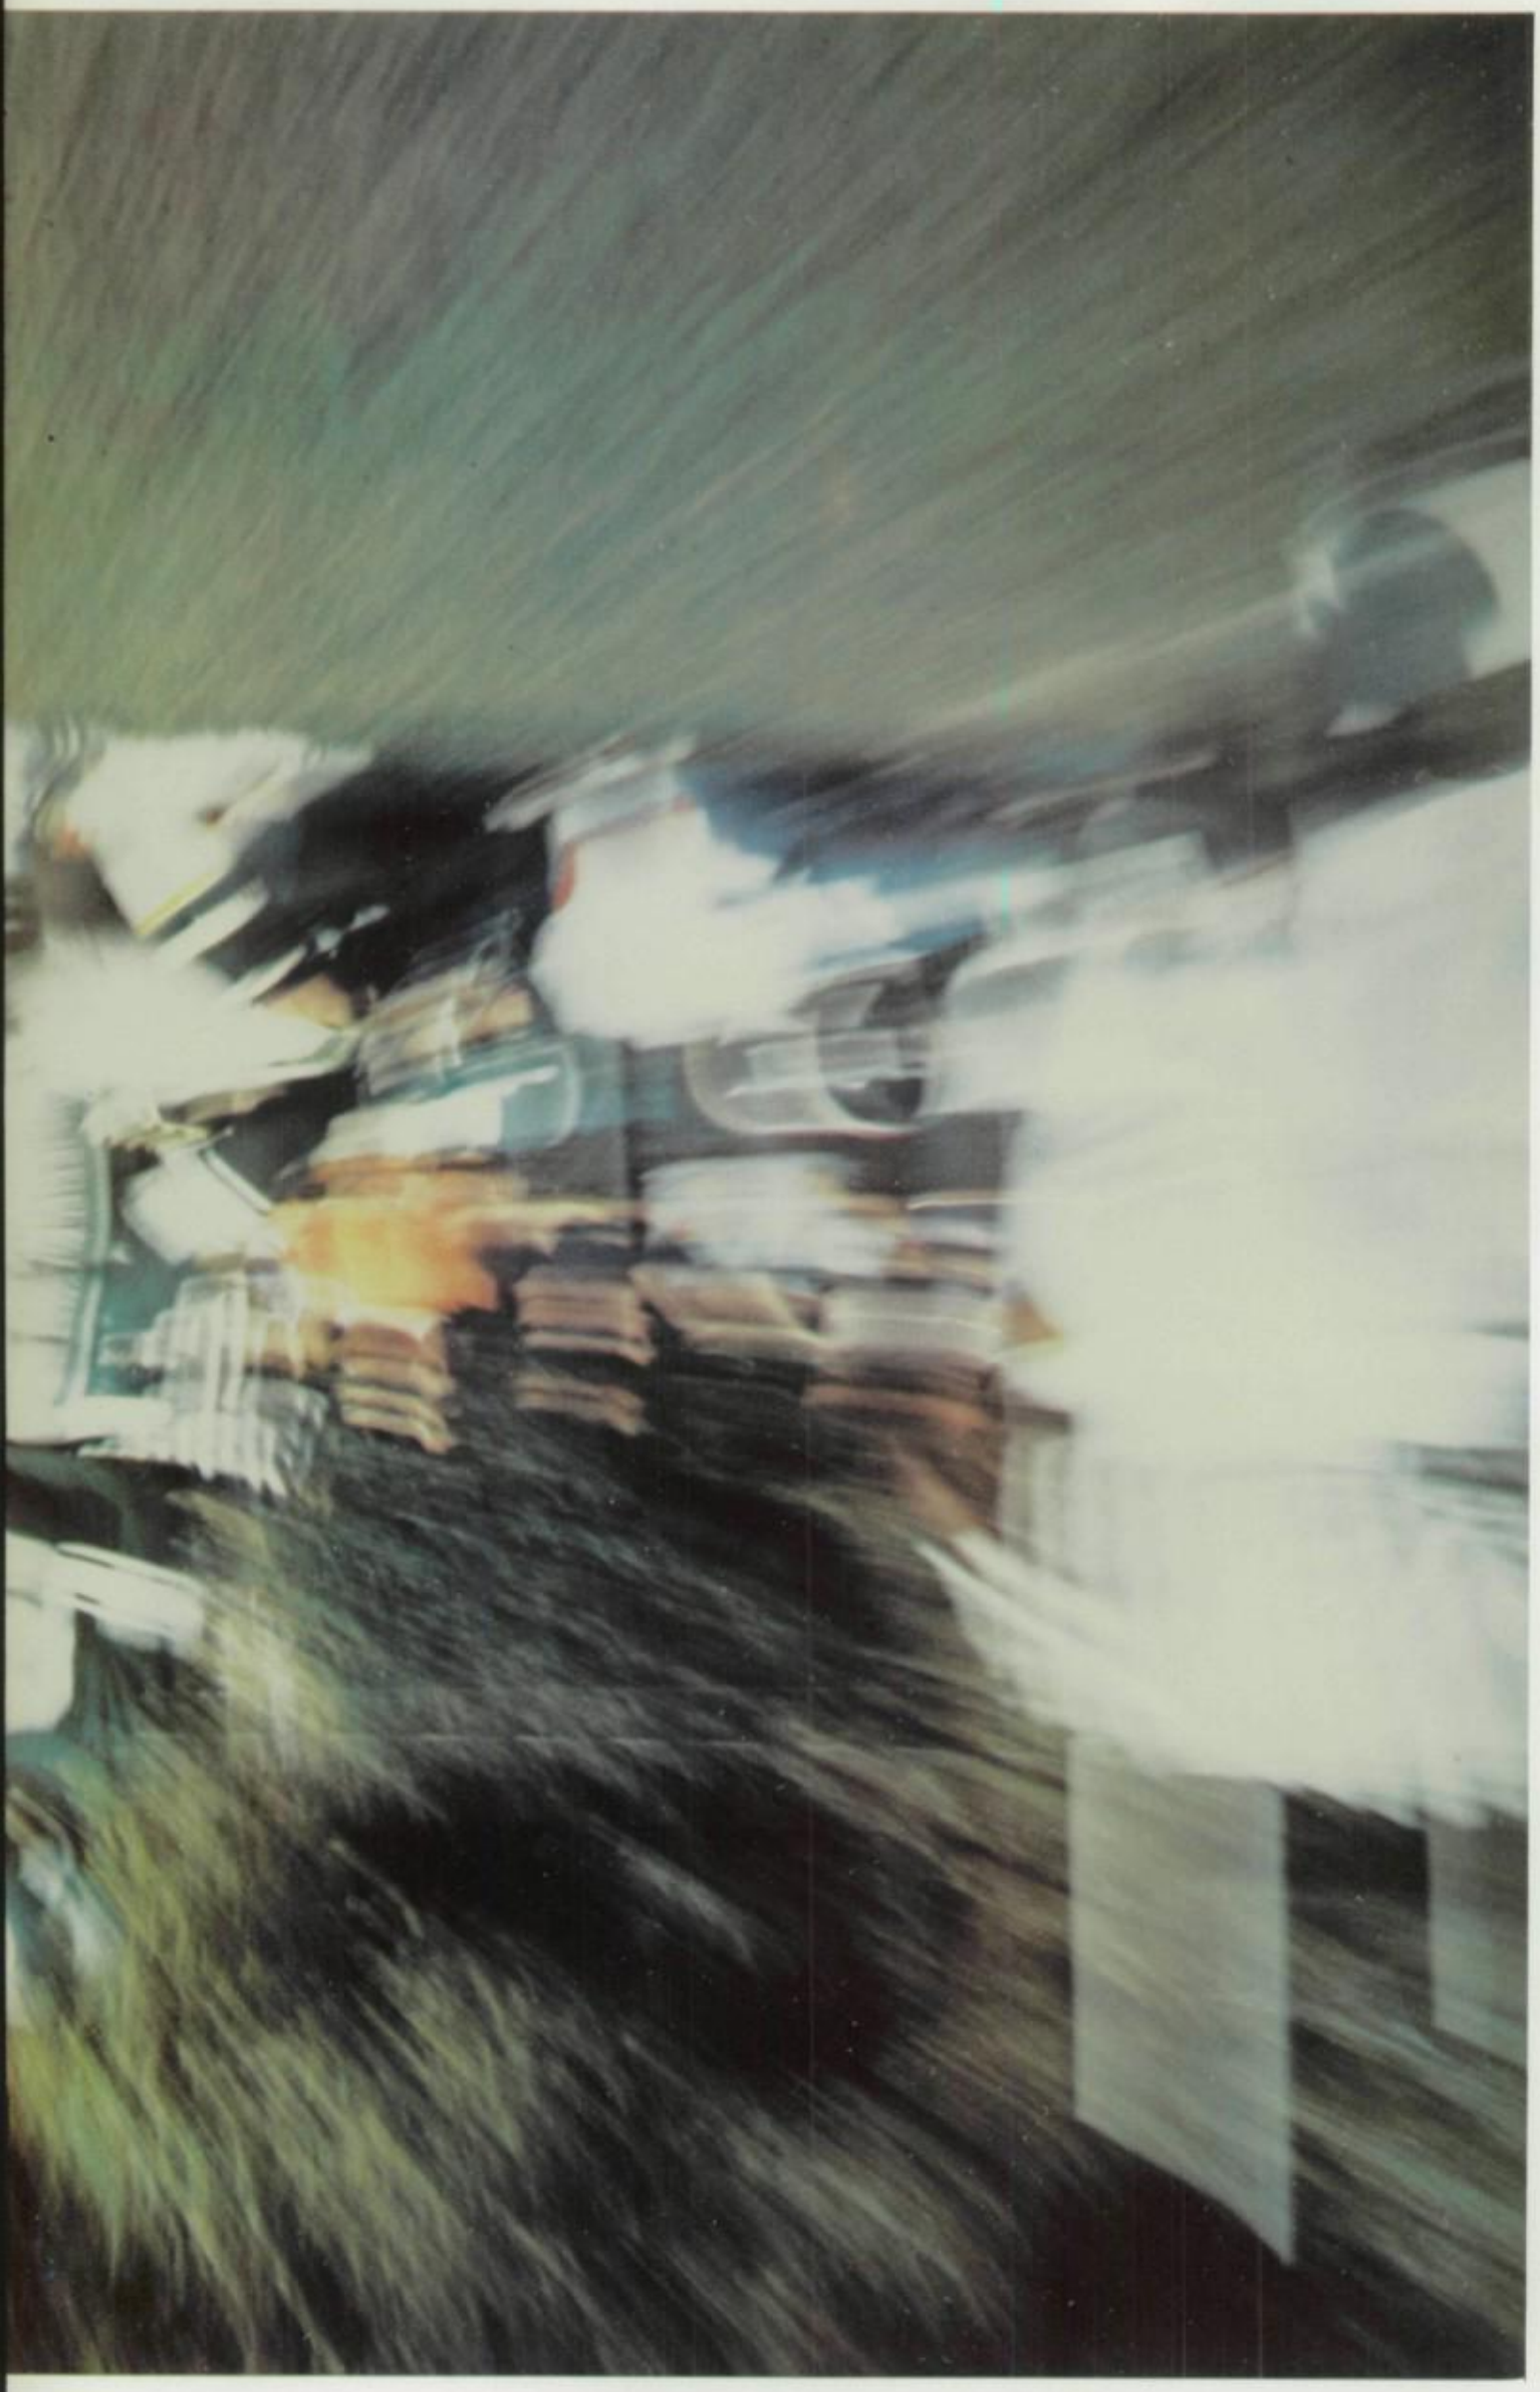
optional: 1 member of the opposite sex, for flavor

Mix car, friends, and directions on a convenient driveway, and stir up discussion for 10 minutes. Frustration can be added now, or after the evening is underway. After the idea has jelled, and all the ingredients are completely blended, toss in the wallet. With a spoonful of spirits the mixture should start to rise, taking shape and direction.

When the wallet used contains a lot of money and the car has a full tank of gasoline, the mixture will head for Chicago, either to a restaurant on Lincoln or Rush Street. When the wallet is empty and the car doesn't have very much gas in it, the mixture could result in a movie in Evanston, or a school-sponsored event, such as a basketball game or concert.

Drench the whole thing in enthusiasm for a good three to five hours, and enjoy.



(Padgitt)

The Bicentennial year provides an opportunity to observe our present situation, as well as the past and the future, from a unique vantage point. To gauge student attitudes regarding current events, ECHOES asked students in eight adviser rooms, representing both sexes of all classes, to respond to topical issues. The questions deal with a variety of concerns, ranging from social ferments and local controversies to foreign policy and international dilemmas.

Serene and quiet, the virgin land lay undisturbed. A crystal-like stillness hung, delicate and vulnerable in the air. All existed in silent harmony, in peace. Then came explosive growth—the silence gave way to the hum of voices and machinery. Meadows gave way to roads, horses to cars. The forest gave way to housing, the land to civilization.

Bicentennial

Exercising their right to assemble, Wilmette patriots celebrate 200 years of freedom. (Doughty)

"The pursuit of happiness" formed the basis for the historical events of America's birth.

Today, also, at New Trier, "the pursuit of happiness" is still the foundation for the diversity of activities and choices of its people. And the events of this Bicentennial year colorfully reflect this goal.

Amid rushing bodies and mobilized books, I stopped still, and looked at a weathered old face and rejuvenated arm. For the first time, I saw that behind a changing mural of moving people, nestled in a seat of grass and concrete, sat a fascinating old lady.

Working on the premise that at times it is easier to learn from a fellow student than a teacher, Student tutoring contributed to another year of academic excellence at New Trier. Proving the program to be a worthwhile experience for both tutee and themselves, 47 volunteer tutors worked an average of two periods a week to help students with individual problems in subjects such as math, English, and foreign language. Tutors who excelled in a subject were matched with students who were having trouble in that same subject.

Once a haven for the studious, the library has now replaced the student lounge as THE place to socialize. (Doughty, Mengel)

(Doughty, Rosenberg)

Solitude removes one in every way from those around him. Everyone needs a few minutes to be free from the influence of others, to create a domain for himself, to be alone. In a classroom the student is a part of a unit; in a place of retreat he operates independently.

The search for such a place could begin in the conventional "quiet places," such as the library or the various resource rooms. The regular pulse of an activity passes by—but the interrupting conversation of a friend, the giggling freshman girls at the next table, or the looming presence of a teacher can intrude upon one's circle of quiet. A window ledge, little used hallway, or a patch of green grass in nice weather offer the solitude needed to escape pressure.

Centerites take a step forward in learning about different walks of life. (Koppel)

The Center for self-directed learning has continued to flourish in its isolated corner of New Trier for six years. Along with age has come an acceptance by students in the parent school of the Center's place as a viable alternative to formal education. The Center can, admittedly, be a cop-out for those who do nothing; on the other hand, it doesn't pressure the student, which may consequently help him to think. A requirement of 25 hours of study per week can be fulfilled at home, in school, or through an internship. Success or failure remains a personal choice, but work is evaluated by a faculty facilitator who acts as a guide throughout the course. Strong points and shortcomings of the course are discussed during small group community meetings rather than during the massive meeting of the Town hall. The Center tries to instill a sense of self-pride and responsibility in each Centerite and encourages him to think and express his thoughts independently.

BUREAUCRACY

You are a small, glittering silver ball. You are battered and bashed from one situation to the next and rarely do you have time to pause and reflect on the past or the present or the future. Inside the machine you are too close to see the direction you are taking. Inside the machine you can hear only the buzzers and the bells; you can see only the flashing lights; you can feel only the bumpers and the springs. Inside the machine you believe that you are ricocheted aimlessly, and you are confused. But, inside the machine you change, and you grow. Each tilt, each replay, each situation shapes you or stimulates you.

"Well, you see, there was a power failure on our block last night and all the clocks stopped, so my alarm clock didn't go off this morning and my mom woke me up late and then the newspaper boy tripped on the steps and my mom had to drive him to the hospital and then when she got back she had to catch the end of her favorite game show and that's why I'm late for school." (Padgitt)

Friendship

It's 8:15 and he's coming in 15 minutes. Why did I ever agree? He asked me earlier this week and I just couldn't believe it. It wasn't that his charm overwhelmed me—he doesn't have any—I just felt sorry for him. Hearing the doorbell ring, I force these thoughts out of my head and start downstairs.

Heart Throb meekly steps across the threshold, meets my mother, attempts to make semi-intelligent conversation, and, of course, fails dismally. I quickly say goodbye and leave with him following at my heels.

Luckily his car is a Volkswagen—bucket seats—no problem. I get in, and plant myself firmly against the door to stay as far away as possible. But each time he reaches for the stick—I shift, thinking he's going for my knees. I keep wondering how long the evening will last.

The downhill rush of madness is temporarily eased by a moment of bucolic ascent. (Ostergaard)

Though he had already seen "Young Frankenstein," he persuades me to go. We arrive ten minutes late, but the darkness hides me so I have no complaints. The film is loaded with lewd jokes, and after each, he nudges me with his elbow, repeats the line and then demands: "Did 'ya get it?" I slowly nod my head in disbelief. Heart Throb leans toward me, and simultaneously I lean in the opposite direction, suddenly intent on the film. The movie finally ends, and in the embarrassing silence during the ride home I develop my plan.

Two blocks from my house, I inconspicuously unbuckle my seatbelt and search for the doorhandle. As we pull in front, he shifts into neutral and awkwardly throws on the brakes. Scared to hesitate a minute longer, I open the door, leap out, and thank him for the great evening. Not waiting for a response, I leave Heart Throb falling over my seat with a puzzled look on his face. It's over at last. Once inside, I sigh with relief.

"C'mon, Ma, it's 4:20 and I told you to be here at 4:15. I hate wasting my time waiting when I could be doing so many other things. And it's so damn cold out here. I wish it was summer again—I'd be sailing. There's nothing like the warm sun on your back in the middle of the lake. It's great when a wave hits you—the water feels good, not like on that hike last fall when we got caught in a storm. That football game in the snow last weekend reminded me a lot of how soaked we got. Right now I'd rather have hot chocolate than beer, I'm freezing. OK, Mom, you're 10 minutes late..."

STUDY HALLS "Study halls are boring and I hate them. I hope next year's freshmen get study halls for the full year. They deserve it." UPPERCLASSMEN "A bunch of Turkeys!" "I thought that the upperclassmen would be in dolent slobs with long hair and ratty clothes. But they were very presentable and courteous." NEW TRIER "I think that NTE is great if you get involved. It has a lot to offer." FRESHMAN YEAR "All my classes are boring except for algebra where we eat peanuts and watch the ants running around on the floor."

Communications

All systems go

ONE OF THE MOST highly developed high school television stations in the country, ITV once again proved indispensable in serving both the township and its students. Aside from broadcasting instructional television to over 30 schools on five channels, the station offered its considerable production facilities to the student body. ITV, jointly operated by a professional staff and four student staffs, has even more expansive plans for the future, including color facilities, more advanced equipment, and the far-reaching goal of an eventual link-up with computer services.

New Trier's other broadcast outlet, WNTH, moved closer to becoming a locally independent radio station with considerably more student-originated programming. With cooperation and organization, students produced more of their own shows than ever before, shows that ran the gamut of radio broadcasts: progressive rock, folk, jazz, country, and news. In addition to expanding its coverage of almost all varsity sports, the station aired, for the first time, student-produced educational programming and a student-written radio play series. The station also broadcast college interviews for those unable to attend them in person. As a result of this increased programming, more students than ever before were able to participate in the operation of the station.

BOTH MEDIA ORGANIZATIONS relied heavily upon student participation. Student engineers volunteered their free time and their cooperation to keep both stations running with maximum efficiency. In return for their efforts, they received invaluable experience in all facets of radio and television production through contact with and instruction in using sophisticated equipment. The result of this cooperation, according to Mr. Richard Dienhart, ITV production director and WNTH faculty sponsor, was a training ground available to all New Trier students for possible future careers in media work.

Debatable points

DEBATE AFFORDED students an opportunity to voice both positive and negative viewpoints on subjects ranging from welfare to the jury system. Because of the great variety of ideas presented in these arguments, the debaters developed a wider understanding of today's controversies.

This year's topic examined the desirability of an international organization to develop and allocate scarce world resources. Researching this broad resolution demanded a great deal of time from both negative and affirmative teams.

DESPITE the expansive subject, the eloquent varsity teams of Joel Elliot and Robin Sylvan, along with John Denniston and Ben Zuraw, placed consistently well in all tournaments entered.

Creation of a forensics class devoted to individual speaking enhanced an already potent debate department.

SPURRED ON by the success of 1975, Inklings, the literary magazine of the school, provided an outlet for student creativity. The magazine transformed scattered student thoughts into a polished publication. Student submittals, placed in the Inklings box in the attendance office, were criticized and reviewed by the hard-working staff, headed by Co-editors Su Williams and Lynn Penney. In addition, the editors determined the layout and final selections of the materials, which included artwork, photography, prose, and poetry. The faculty sponsor, Mrs. Linda Relias, directed the staff in placing the final touches on the magazine before the two thousand copies were ready for distribution.

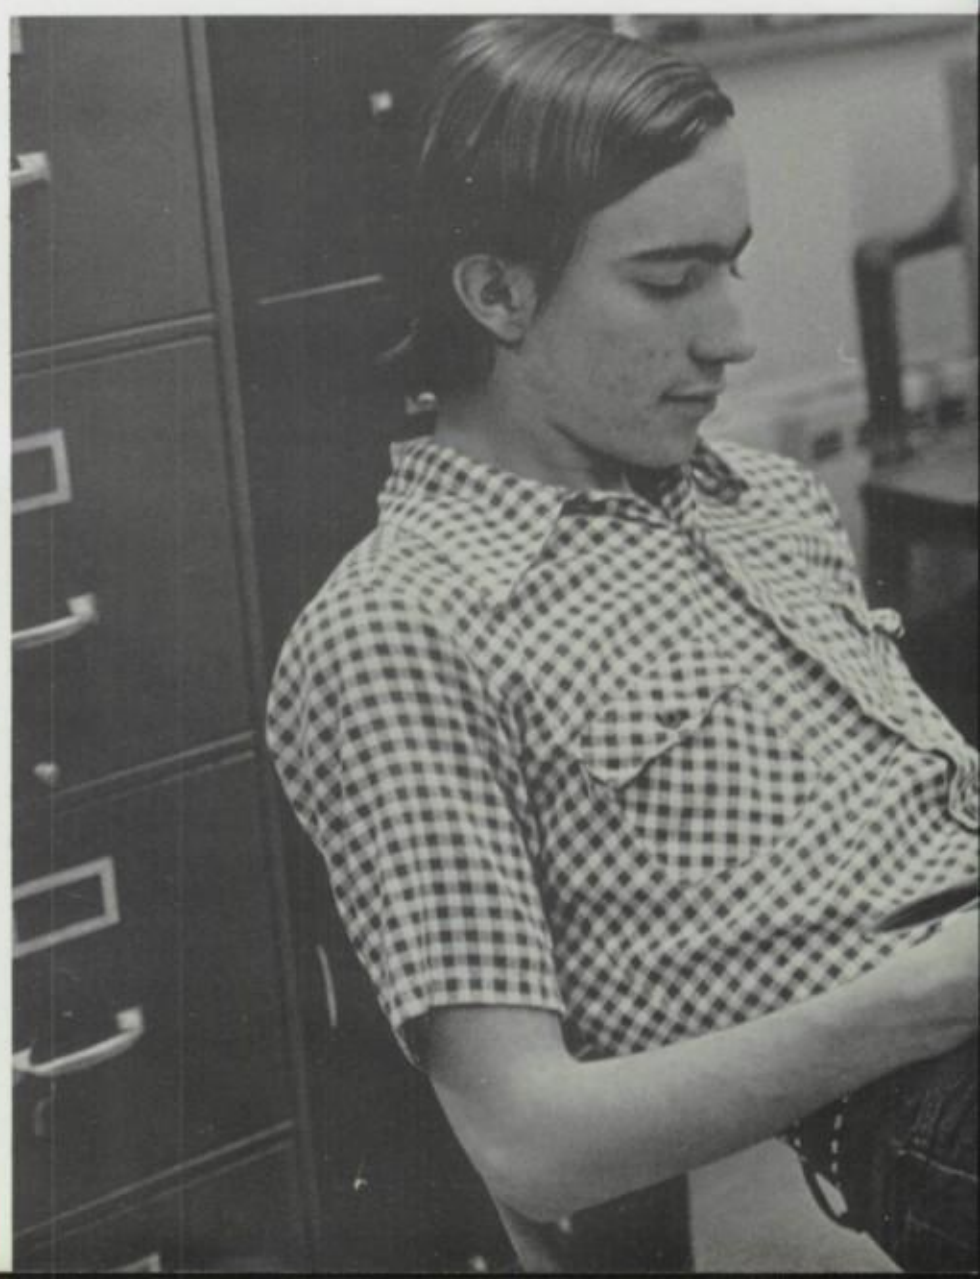
Ragtime

ONCE YOU PICK IT UP, you can't put it down. On Fridays it's evident—scarcely a New Trier student can ignore the stack of New Trier News brought into advisory. Despite problems and criticisms of its content, the News maintained the desire to publish the best paper possible and keep the students informed.



THE STAFF'S GRUELING ROUTINE of creating, writing, and "pasting up" gave New Trier a paper that served its myriad needs. Constant search for new features and interesting content proved exhausting. Classified ads and surveys were the key factors in stimulating student interest, according to Editor-in-chief Robert Mitchell. "The News must reflect the interests of the students. Consequently, an active student body insures stimulating content in the paper," he remarked. He indicated student apathy as a major bane, citing the willingness of the students to criticize the paper but the lack of initiative in helping it.

The News' staff sought to generate a paper that reflected this year of change and crisis. Student readership of the paper and the strength of their opinions about it indicated the success of the staff's efforts.

All booked up

THE BICENTENNIAL edition of ECHOES was the direct result of endurance and resilience. A certain chaos prevailed during its production, which was not unique. Captioning, indexing, typewriters clicking, chairs rumbling, phone ringing, radio blaring, proofreading, cropping; layout, contact sheets, prints, photo assignments, birthday cakes: total confusion, out of which, miraculously, a yearbook emerged.

The chapter format of last year's book was again incorporated, but the addition of the opening and student life sections added a new twist to this year's publication.

THE STAFF, working with determination, put in many seven-day weeks to meet all deadlines. While juniors kept busy with the assignments of the day, Sponsor Norman Frey, Editor-in-chief Dan Fisch, General managing editor Jim Borovsky, and other senior editors kept the work flowing smoothly.

In October, three senior staff members traveled to New York for the Columbia Scholastic press seminar. Many new ideas introduced at the seminar were used in the production of this year's book, setting a trend for future editions of ECHOES.

At the close of ECHOES day, every one of the 3,400 copies was sold.

As part of their initiation, new staff members learn valuable lifesaver techniques. (Woods)

First stringers

THEY COME in all shapes and sizes: big, little, wide, slender, stubby, and long. They are constructed of various materials: wood, brass, steel, and ivory. They make all types of sounds: deep and moaning, high and delicate, wailing and crashing.

The job of musicians is to combine all these sounds into a harmonious melody. For one period each day, orchestra members transformed from ordinary students into an elite group of musicians. They studied without textbooks, created without words, and tested without exams.

The only true test of an orchestra is its performance. High-grade performances at the Christmas and Spring festivals, the Scholarship concert, and solo concerts were the hallmarks of the orchestras.

'76 Trombones

START SOFTLY. Keep the tempo up. Trumpets are going too fast. That's a full rest, clarinets. Now crescendo. Can't hear the flutes. Cool it saxophones. Oboes come in. Don't fade out. Final measure. Bravo!

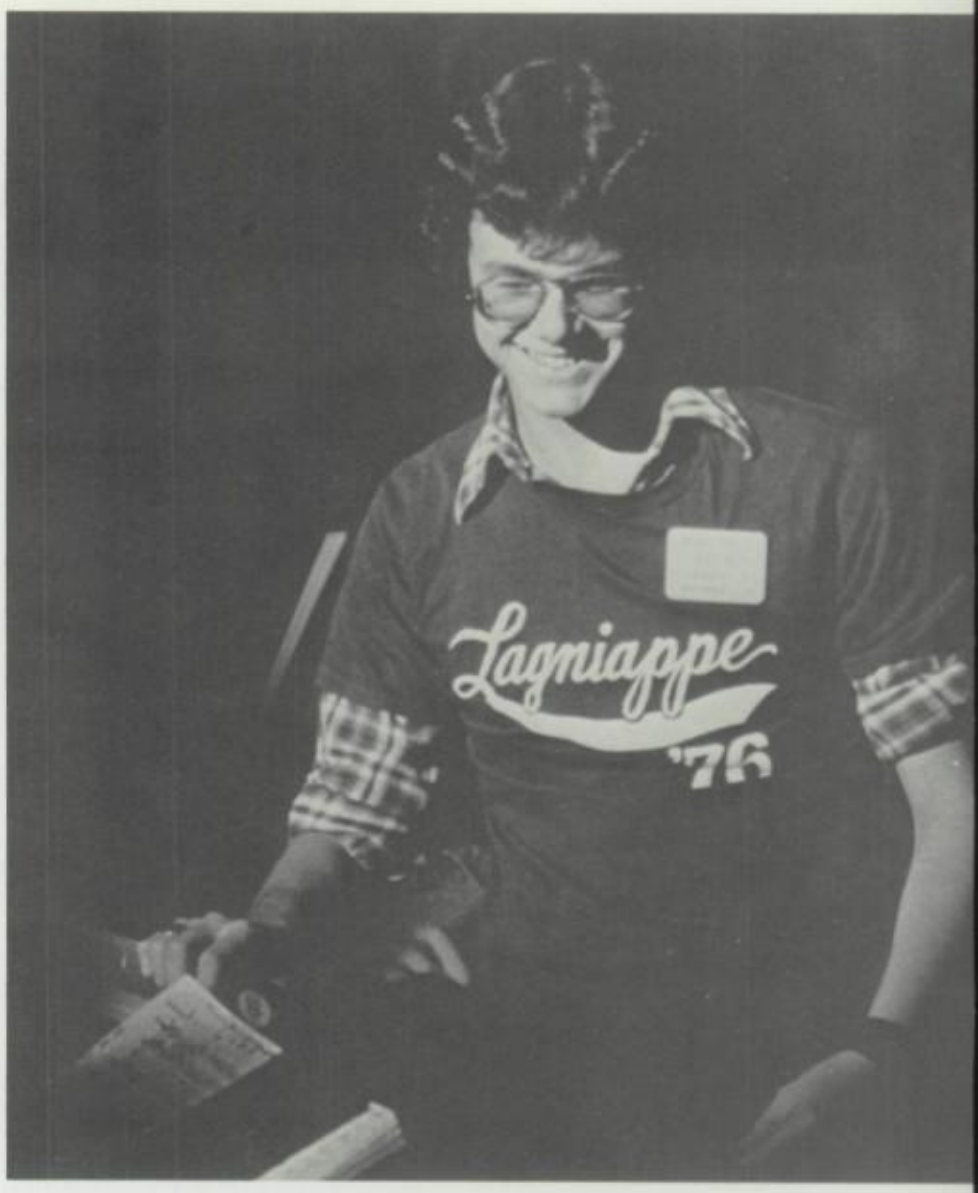
The Honor band made itself heard from the third floor of the music building to Washington D.C. Performing on the White House lawn and touring Philadelphia highlighted a hard year's effort for Conductor Joel Streightiff and his band.

With its usual swing the Jazz band kept feet tapping and fingers snapping at the Christmas and Spring festivals. Under the direction of Phyllis Clendening, the band offered a creative outlet for talented musicians and hosted trombonist Bill Watrous for Jazz night.

'How the West Was Taken'

SIX MONTHS of cattle-driving determination made "How the West was Taken" possible. One of the few westerns in Lagniappe's history, it marked the 38th annual performance of the all-student production. The play proved to be one of the most popular events of the year, as over 200 people turned out to participate and full house audiences applauded every performance. Rachel Garron and Dimitri Moraitis supervised the entire production, which was written by Brian Cornelius and directed by Gary Gross.

The play focused on a con man in the small town of Prosperity, California. The swindler, Zeb Peck, sets out to accomplish the biggest con of his life; but stumbles over a few obstacles, such as love, guilt, betrayal, and plain rotten luck. In a hilarious and slighty risque scene, Zeb corners Celia, an innocent young maid, and tries to seduce her, singing, "Peck's Persuasion". But innocence and virtue triumph, and Celia's true love, Billy, rescues her in the nick of time.



David Abell keeps his enthusiasm for the production close to his heart. (Woods)

ANOTHER FAVORITE, the revival scene, roused not only the cast, but also the audience. Set in a graveyard, the Preacher opened the scene with "How Sad our Hearts," and then led the cast to rowdy, holy exultation with "By and by." As with all westerns, this one ended with Zeb and his daughter heading towards the sinking sun, leaving Prosperity to live happily ever after.

A unique aspect of Lagniappe was the backstage performance of the cast. Unity among the cast members brought out the best in everyone. Through the efforts of the cast and administrative board, Lagniappe '76 took not only "the West," but also East.

'Arsenic and Old Lace'

"COMEDY SHOWS MAN firmly rooted to the ground by his own limitations . . . . While it jars us with the evidence that we are no better than other people, it always comforts us with the knowledge that most people are no better than we are . . . . It allows us to laugh at our fear of death, pain, loneliness, hunger, and sexual inadequacy . . . . That laughter is the celebration of life." (Excerpted from the program.)

The winter play, "Arsenic and Old Lace," was a celebration of life and death, created by the bizarre adventures of spinster aunts trying their hand at murder. The characterization of the two old ladies by Ann Callaway and Julia Marran enhanced the humor of Joseph Kesselring's play. Bill Driscoll as the insane nephew added a light touch. If comedy is measured by laughter, then the play was a total success.

The light brigade

THEY WERE THE SHADOWS. Dressed entirely in black, the Stage crew crept quickly, silently on and off stage carrying scenery and props. Their unseen hands manipulated light and sound. The special moments of the performance itself were the reflection of the crews' many hours of work. Their devotion and creativity produced the scenery, lighting, costumes, and make-up that were unique to each production. Guided by Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Gill, the crew's mammoth and unseen efforts made Performing arts complete.

Dance concert '76

WAITING IN THE WINGS for the curtain to go up, the advanced dance groups silently readied themselves for the culmination of three months of preparation: the presentation of their annual dance concert. There had been arduous rehearsals and sore muscles, strenuous dance sequences, and long stretches of waiting. But the dancers realized that their efforts were worthwhile when they shared a vibrant communication with their audience.

The first of three pieces, Mr. Edward Nicholson's "Revolution," depicted a personal view of three eras of American revolt: the break with England in 1776, the counter culture of the 1960's, and a mechanical revolution of the future.

American life remained the theme of the second dance, Mrs. Christine Fassnacht's "Network," but dealt with its different aspects rather than different time periods. She set "Country Roads," "Neon Strip," "Main Street" and three others to the rousing music of Ernest Mansfield. The final piece, "Tryptych," choreographed by Mrs. Suzanne Wente, Mrs. Linda Krivkovich, and student assistant Julia Davis, produced a mystical feeling in contrast to the first two numbers.

The style and precision which over 100 students displayed on stage confirmed dance as an essential dimension of performing arts at New Trier.

'Oklahoma!'

FRONTIER EARTHINESS temporarily surfaced at New Trier with the Performing arts production of "Oklahoma!" Director William Peterman once again coordinated the students and staff into a magnificently staged musical comedy.

"Oklahoma!" the first American stage musical, describes a romance set during the western surge of the opening of the new territories. The plot is typical of early American humor, gently poking fun at the easygoing manner of pioneer people. Three plain folk, Curly, Laurie, and Will Parker generate the plot of the play as they search for love on the prairie.

This year's production, mildly scaled down due to budget cuts, didn't match the opulence of previous shows. However, the lack of money didn't diminish the profusion of talent the Performing arts division has. Both casts performed well with the ample assistance of the symphony orchestra, whose renditions of "Surrey with the Fringe on Top," "Everything's Up To Date in Kansas City," and "Oklahoma!" rivaled those of any professional orchestra.

After school specials

THE END OF EVERY SCHOOL DAY found many students seeking both interesting activities and worthwhile accomplishments. Both these needs were answered through the broad offerings of clubs. Everything from botany to bridge was open to exploration and many students seized these opportunities.

The Junior and Senior music clubs gave students the chance to improve their musical abilities by performing before other members. Their monthly meetings also provided an outlet for the abundant musical talent found in both clubs.

CLUBS WHICH OFFERED MEMBERS mental stimulus also enjoyed increased participation. Spurred on by last year's first place finish in the National math exam, Bernoullians brushed up on basic math skills as well as exploring more intricate mathematical theories. Bridge club used a duplicate game format to allow bridge fans to learn both the fundamental and more advanced bridge techniques. Drawn by the prospect of a good game, Chess clubbers congregated on Friday afternoons to sharpen their strategies. Model club, a place where precision and detailed work are requirements, was frequented by students who combined excess energy and concentration to create workable models.

EXUBERANT INTEREST centered around the four science clubs. Trips to such places as the Indiana Dunes and the Michael Reese medical center, coupled with increased membership, marked a triumphant year for the Biology club. Astronomy club continued its nocturnal successes with Friday night star gazing and after school lectures. Adding a slightly new twist to the usual topics, Aesculapians offered medically oriented students films and discussions on subjects ranging from transcendental meditation to nursing. The school also enjoyed the return of the Ecology club, which offered its members the opportunity to study and help improve environmental problems through club projects.

Ship-shape

FELLOWSHIP, sportsmanship, and citizenship are the mainstays that have kept Tri-ship afloat for the past 50 years. A very popular ice cream social, an amazingly successful canned food drive, and a record-breaking Christmas tree sale highlighted Tri-ship's 50th anniversary. The Homecoming concert featured a talented Ramsey Lewis, whose substantial fee caused a mild setback. This misfortune failed to discourage the board and proved a needed inspiration for successful endeavors. Ninety-nine gallons of ice-cream were gobbled up at the ice-cream social, netting $400.

WITH THE COOPERATION of the entire student body, the canned food drive left Chciago Erie House 14,502 cans healthier. In the true Christmas spirit, the annual tree sale boosted the club's scholarship fund enormously with the purchase of over 2,200 firs, pines, and spruces. The profit of some $10,000 shattered previous records.

Exceptional services in many overlooked areas such as Usher and Service corps furthered Tri-ship's admirable accomplishments.

Crowd pleasers

"THE SPIRIT of Indian-Pendence," the Homecoming theme of this Bicentennial year, epitomized the high level of excitement and activity generated by Pep club. The Homecoming committee, under the supervision of Co-heads Patty Matthei and Julie Warren, added a new flavor to the weekend with the sale of blue and orange gum on "Chew up Evanston Day." High spirits continued through to halftime of the football game, where a live horse at the head of the parade provided a special attraction.

The Pep club treasury received an extra boost through the sale of green and white striped mittens in addition to t-shirts. Weekly rep meetings were established in order to involve a wider spectrum of girls in the financial, publicity, and social activities of the club. Guided by hard-working President Sarah Purcell and Faculty sponsor Marilyn Domek, the new members, along with the dedicated board and committees, achieved a truly superlative year in Pep club history.

PENCILS AND CLIPBOARDS in hand, statisticians followed the team up and down the field, efficiently recording sports data. A valuable asset to the Sports service organization, the statisticians, along with the timers, provided vital assistance to many coaches.

Gymkana and the New Trier guard, the two other divisions of the organization, concentrated on instruction.

On Saturday mornings, the two groups introduced fundamental gymnastic and swimming techniques to grade school youngsters. Gymkana offered enthusiastic children the opportunity to acquire fluidity in movement. Guard instilled confidence and stressed water safety, while teaching basic skills to young swimmers.

For 'em all

A DIVERSE MIXTURE of legislation typified this year's Student council crusade to improve daily life at school. Feeling that free time needed redirection, the executive board allocated increased funds to the Educational opportunities committee. Working with their enlarged budget, EOC initiated new programs, including the Movie of the week, which flickered into existence on Wednesdays. In conjunction with more constructive use of class time, council's proposal of a consumer education test in lieu of the course was bought by the school board.

However, the foremost issue facing council involved Illinois state Senate bill 1493. Passage of the bill would allow New Trier township residents to hold a tax referendum for their schools. A group of concerned students took immediate action, and led by President John Denniston, they journeyed to Springfield to distribute petitions calling for an override of Governor Walker's veto of the bill.

The first semester board felt that, overall, council initiated more affirmative political action this year than ever before.

A friend indeed

PATIENCE AND perseverance constitute the staple ingredients of a Social service volunteer. The recipe calls for three hours of weekly extracurricular time, a school year's worth of devotion, and immeasurable effort.

With these qualities in mind, the 1976 Social service board began their yearly recruiting, drawing enthusiastic response. Increased numbers of participants encouraged the expansion of frontiers, including the creation of the new senior citizen program at Northwestern Nursing center.

Enveloped in board affairs, members Laurie Tilley, Steve Smith and Marcy Planer huddle in conference. (Mengel)

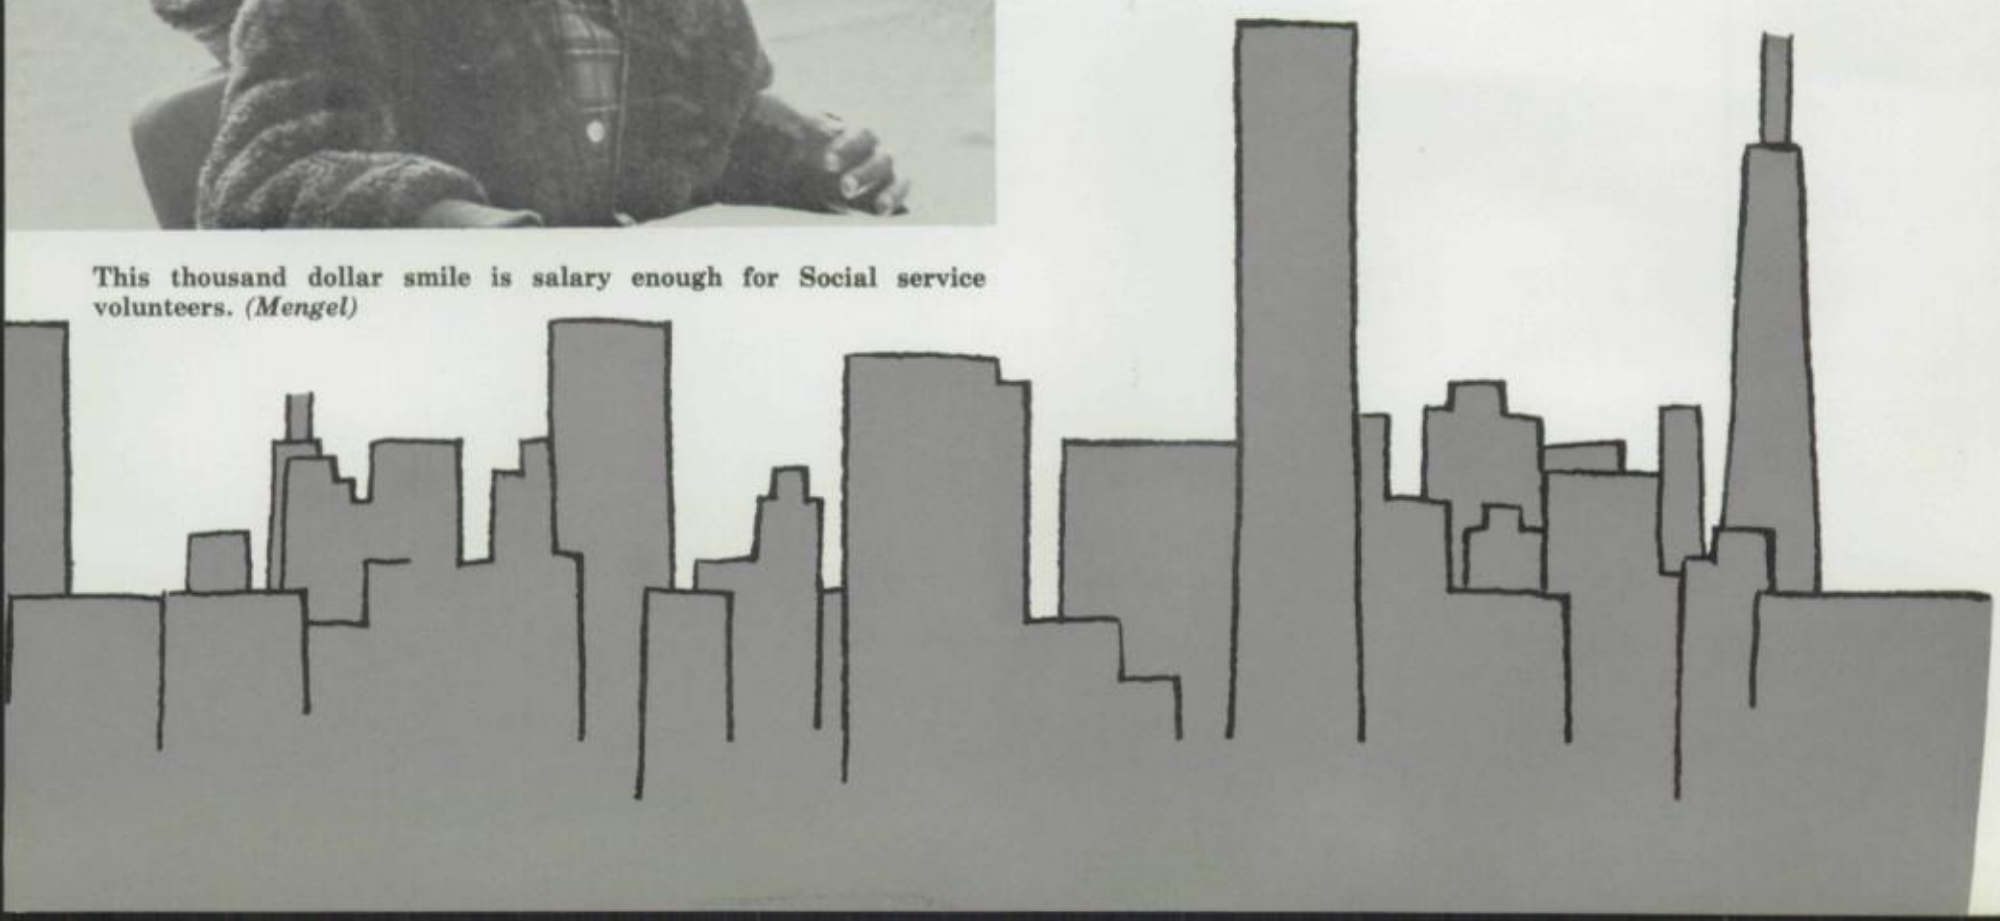
THE BOARD continued fund raising plans with its second annual rummage sale held in January. Profits from the sale were supplemented by band concerts and bakesales sponsored by individual groups.

The new faculty sponsor, Mr. Gene Kroschel, in conjunction with his eight group board, emphasized close student-tutor relationships as fundamental to learning. Co-heads Mary Minow and Andrea Maynard commented that the benefits of these one-to-one relationships produced the good feelings that kept Social service alive.



Taking care of business

AT THE SOUND OF THE BELL ending afternoon classes, the mad rush to bicycles and cars is on. Why? To get to that job on time. Whether out of necessity or just to have a little more pocket money, neighborhood drugstores, supermarkets, and ice cream parlors were full of New Trier students trying to make a buck.

GETTING A JOB is a real challenge. There are comparatively few part-time jobs available; employers prefer experienced workers who are out of high school and can work full time. Holding on to the job while still making time for outside activities and homework presents another problem. Theoretically, the first thing to go should be leisure time, for academic survival is crucial to the student. But no one wants to give up his free time, so instead of doing all the math problems, only the first, middle, and last are done. If an English paper is due the next day, the math, Spanish, and history are all postponed indefinitely.

WORKING quickly forces a realization of priorities. Last are football games, concerts, and sleep; at the top is trying to get your employer to think that you are doing more work than you actually are. After all, working isn't all that bad and it is a learning experience. As for its other rewards, well, every two weeks there's the paycheck.

Stranger in a strange land

A COMMON UNDERSTANDING among peoples of the world is priceless in this age of paramount international concerns. In order to further this understanding, the American field service provided an interchange of learning and living experiences for high school students. AFS enabled students from different countries to interact and share their cultures with each other. The organization's motto, "Walking and talking together," reflected the AFS spirit of peace through sharing school, community, and social experiences.

AFS exposed the students to American social life as well as American academics through a reception and a dinner which encouraged them to mingle with the community members other than their school colleagues. Trying to integrate their ethnic cultures with their new American knowledge was a challenge to AFS exchange students. Their task was facilitated by the understanding AFS board who sponsored International day.

The longest yard

IT WAS INDIAN summer. The Honor band struck up the New Trier fight song. Pep club posters predicted victory. The cheerleaders tried out new jumps. All this as the 1975 Varsity football team kicked off to an auspicious debut in the Central Suburban league.

A toilet paper-strewn field in Deerfield early in the season marked the battle of giants. New Trier East gave Deerfield, state-champions-to-be, a close, exciting contest, losing in the waning moments of the game.

With that contest behind them, the Indians moved toward a 5 and 3 record. A highlight of the season was the 16 to 9 victory over arch-rival Evanston. The Indians bested sister-school New Trier West, leaving them scoreless for the third successive season.

The offense was led by junior quarterback Rich Weiss, leading scorer Dale Estabrook, and fullback Alex Kaseberg. Weiss' primary receiver was State honorable mention, Will Volkmann. Linebackers Chuck Harper and Hank Slingerland, with the help of another State honorable mention candidate, John Favorite, anchored the sturdy defense.

WHILE VARSITY members were breakfasting, dressing, and getting psyched, the Freshman A, Freshman B, and sophomore teams were already out on the grid, fighting hard to bring in two league championships and a second place.

The sophomore squad, completing its first season in the Central suburban league, captured a second place finish. Duff Volkmann, Joe Brennan, and Pete DiClementi, backbones of a determined team, provided the spark that fired the team to victory.

Rallying after a first game loss, the Freshman A team went on to win seven consecutive games and capture the league crown.

The Freshman B team also took the Central suburban league title with an unblemished record. Its overwhelming defense held opponents scoreless for the entire season.

DESPITE A LACK of experience at the beginning of the season, New Trier's varsity soccer team enjoyed one of its most successful campaigns in recent years, suffering only one regular season defeat. The team, consisting primarily of underclassmen, tied for first place in the Central suburban league, along with rivals Evanston and New Trier West. Undefeated for their first 12 games, the Indian drive was highlighted by overtime victories against Evanston and Wheaton Central.

Led by all-state goalie Rick McNerney, defensemen Dan Copp and John Welch, New Trier was rarely scored upon. An awesome offensive attack complimented this fine defense. All-American senior Kent Leonard and all-conferencer Gerry Konradt, along with junior speedster Mitch Hoffman, connected for the majority of the team's scores. Contributing to both offense and defense were midfielders Eric Sommers, Phelps Hoyt, and all-stater Scott Alster.

NEW TRIER'S POST SEASON play began with a convincing 3-0 victory over Niles North. However, the season came to an abrupt end in the sectional finals when a fired up Evanston ball club defeated the Indians by a score of 2-1, leaving them with an excellent 13-2-2 overall record.

The JV team also had a fine season, posting a record of 5-2-3, enabling the team to capture second place in the Central suburban league.

COACH MULLINER'S sophomore squad had a disappointing fourth place finish in their division. The team, which had a strong defensive unit, was hurt by a lack of scoring punch.

Getting off to a fast start, the freshmen cruised to an impressive 8-4-1 record. This year's enormous team, consisting of an unbelievable 59 players, performed well throughout the season. Coach Tom Garden praised his squad as having "a lot of depth and talent."

In the long run

(Doughty)

WELL PREPARED for the last meet, New Trier East cross country runners contemplated their past season. They had faced stiff competition in the North division of the Central suburban league. The highlight of the year was a surprise fourth place finish in the Mattoon Invitational. That behind them, they now concentrated on the meet ahead.

As the team left the bus, their opponents noticed two girls with the varsity squad. For the first time, the varsity ranks included two girl runners, Ann Maine and Anne Kruempelstaedter.

With many outstanding performances behind them, Dave Knoop and Sam Detmer warmed up to the new terrain. They were joined by Pat Lane and Captain Dave Waitley, as the first runners headed for the course.

At the start of the varsity race the runners finished their last stretches, glanced furtively at the hill that awaited them, and lined up. Coach Ben Almaguer gave the last bit of advice, "Hurry back." Tension mounted as the starter lifted the gun, but after the crack, the strain and apprehension disappeared. Now all that mattered was the guy in front. Quickly they found the pace, with natural and rythmic strides. All those long practices around Indian Hill and the grueling laps at the track had paid off. The running itself had become second nature.

Kings of clubs

BY CAPTURING second place in the Central suburban league, the varsity golf team, under Coach Clint Carlstrom, made a marked impression. District medalist Paul Hindsley distinguished himself by shooting a four under par 32 at Highland Park. Starting seniors Scott Fisher, Bob Kulp, Tom Murphy, and Pat Quinn complemented this successful season's effort. Sparked by this nucleus, the varsity's performance jelled at the end of the season to produce a first place finish in the Central suburban league meet.

The undefeated sophomore team, coached by Mr. Tom Swarsen, snatched first place in the league. With tremendous play by Peter Lawler, John Donahue, and Jim Kaplan, the sophomores capped their perfect season with a runaway victory in the league meet. Seven returning sophomores will lead next year's squad.

SUCCESS was the credo of this year's Girls' tennis team, as outstanding individual skill and unusual group enthusiasm propelled them into second place within the newly formed Central suburban league. The 12 close-knit members, coached by Mary Jo Herzog, capped off their fine season by winning seven out of 10 matches. Kathy Stearns, number one singles player for the past four years, spurred her teammates on to excellent performances. The tandem of Stephanie Frei and Betsy Stogin won the district semifinals and proceeded down state. The junior varsity team also played extremely well, battling to a first place tie with Highland Park for the league title.

Sticklers for perfection

HITTING PEBBLES for distance with tree branches, as original field hockey players did, is a far cry from the sport today. In olden days, female athletes, tired of running and jumping contests, sought other forms of recreation. Thus evolved field hockey of today, a highly competitive sport, which was brilliantly executed by New Trier East.

A new, more effective formation spurred the Girls' field hockey team to yet another spectacular showing. Garnering their fourth consecutive undefeated season, the team went on to become Sectional champions in the first state championship meet.

Under Coach Bonnie Beach, the girls developed into a precision unit, manifested by every aspect of their play. The efforts of high scoring seniors Sarah Badger and captain Lisa Marder precipitated the team's quest for success.

Both the Junior varsity and B team's seasons culminated in undefeated records, furnishing a strong backbone for next year's team.

Home of the wave

OVER 700 SWIMMERS crowded the halls and locker rooms at New Trier in November, jostling for places in the first Illinois girls' state swim meet. A strong contender in the meet, the home team finished in fourth place. Martha Redding set the pace for the swimmers, while varsity diver Cindy Allen sprang past Ann McDivitt in a close contest for first place in the state diving competition.

The varsity team, which splashed to an undefeated record and a first place finish in the Central suburban league, gave Coach Lee Kennicke reason for anticipating equal success next season.

Driving a model tee

STRETCHING OUT FOREVER, the late afternoon green and gold of the course was an invitation to a game. Oblivious to their surroundings, though, the Girls' golf team diligently practiced on. Their hard work paid off—with a fourth place finish in the state. Although the team started the season in the rough, facing stiff competition from Waukegan East and Libertyville, their stroke straightened out in the state meet, bringing seventh and 22nd places to Allison Finney and Karen Parsegian, respectively.

Coach Geraldine Ryberg looked to juniors Lisa Howard and Mary Powell to lead the squad even higher next year.

Walking tall

"SEYFARTH SHOOTS from the corner . . . GOOD! Evanston brings the ball downcourt, the shot . . . no good. Ryan grabs the rebound, a quick pass to Musica, Mike's jumper is up . . . swish! The 'Musica Magic' comes through again." This typical sequence resounded from the WNTH broadcast booth throughout the Indians' basketball season. A varied attack and steady defense punished Central suburban league opponents into submission as New Trier captured first place. The team's regional loss did little to offset their overall fine performance.

Co-captains Chris Seyfarth and Jeff Ryan garnered all-league honors with their exceptional scoring and defensive abilities. They were complemented by ball-hawk Rich Temmerman, a returning starter, and sharpshooters Tom Hall and Mike Musica. Seniors Jamie Anderson and Marty Ordman, and junior Tony Peterson teamed with Musica to provide the depth at guard necessary to be champions. With three returning starters, next year's squad will make the radio booth an even livelier place.

SUFFERING FROM a detrimental lack of height, Coach Terry Barton's JV team finished an adequate season with an overall record of 10-8. Despite this definite height disadvantage, the team compensated with quick, hard working guards, who should benefit the varsity squad next year.

Owning the second finest record in Central suburban league competition, Coach Bill Fly's sophomore squad displayed excellent shooting, aggressive rebounding, and superb positional play throughout the year. Centering around forwards John Donahoe and Bill Peters, the team handily dominated all areas of the game.

Under the expert leadership of Coach Bob Leahy, the frosh A cagers brilliantly went through their season, suffering only one defeat. Their 20-1 record gave them unprecedented control of the Central suburban league and enabled them to easily capture their league title.

As did the A squad, the Freshman B team enjoyed an extremely fine season, capturing the Central suburban league title. Characterized by excellent substitutes and a tenacious defense, the squad cruised to a fine 13-5 season.

'The mold of form'

ALTHOUGH A TEAM SPORT, gymnastic squads are composed of individual participants. When competing, each gymnast is on his own, but his team benefits or suffers from his performance. The varsity squad profited from the achievements of several outstanding specialists. They handily won the Central suburban league, going undefeated in league meets and posting an overall record of 14-1.

Trampolinist Brian Avery, who shattered the school record by scoring 9.0 points during the season, flipped his way to second place in the state meet. Other outstanding performers included Mark Jiganti, on still rings; Mark Etheridge, who finished 18th in floor exercise; Bill O'Neil, 14th place on trampoline; and Taylor Davis, 21st place on the pommel horse.

Increased proficiency in all facets of performance epitomized the Freshman and Sophomore teams' seasons.

Well stated

IN TRUE WARRIOR fashion, the swimming team shaved their heads in preparation for their final confrontation. On the warpath, the Indians battled their way to a second place finish in the climactic state meet. This was the result of hours of hard work: practice that in mileage brought the swimmers almost all the way around the world.

Julian Mack, New Trier's fastest sprinter ever, peaked at the state meet, winning the 100 yard freestyle and placing second in the 50 yard freestyle. Co-captain Bill Brackett propelled himself to a second place finish in the 100 yard backstroke. Fine performances were turned in by both relay squads. The 200 yard medley relay team of co-captain Dick Ruderman, Brackett, Tom Holmberg, and Paul Shepherd placed third overall, while the 400 yard relay team made up of seniors Ruderman and Bruce Bendix and juniors Mack and Skip Ashmore displayed exceptional talent, placing second in the state meet.

They've got the grip

WRESTLING HAS COME a long way since its ancient predecessor, the pancration, a rough and tumble, anything-goes bout in which only biting was prohibited. Grappling history includes such prestigious moments as a challenge match between Henry VIII of England and Frances I of France. Ancient Egyptian monuments depicting over 100 holds still survive.

This year's Varsity wrestling squad followed the tradition of hard work, dedication, and determination. Although hampered by frequent injuries, the team still managed to turn in some impressive individual performances. Seniors Bill Potts, Dave Lyons, and Earl Beebe, along with junior Alec Rothrock, all enjoyed outstanding seasons and qualified for the sectionals, placing among the top 65 wrestlers among the hundreds in the state.

Head coach Jim Kruempelstaedter also showed increased optimism toward next year's team based on the abundance of talent found on the freshman, sophomore, and junior varsity levels.

Best of the crest

THE SKILLS of soccer, basketball, and swimming are all combined in the sport of water polo. A great water polo player is not only a good swimmer but an adept ball handler. Varsity co-captains Tim Porter and Bill Brackett proved to be such players. Porter, one of the top 15 scorers in the state, led the team in scoring, as he racked up goals. Defense was bolstered by Brackett, who held the opposition's top scorers in check. Led by these two seniors, the varsity had a winning record for the first time in its three-year history, finishing with a 6-5 mark.

The team was forced to overcome many handicaps in its quest for success. Having to share the use of the pool with the girls' swimming team, the Indians could practice only twice a week. This, coupled with the coaches possessing only three years' experience , made the squad's accomplishments remarkable. As the outstanding JV team gained a finer knowledge of the skills and fundamentals of the sport, Coach Bill Wolff anticipated continued improvement next year.

The writing on the wall spells victory for the varsity water polo team. (Doughty)

Slap happy

(Woods)

FASCINATED FANS eagerly watched the New Trier hockey team skate and score its way through their season. Playing hockey requires total concentration from team members in stick handling and skating amid the fury of bodies and the whizzing of pucks. The demands of the game's hectic pace, fast starts, stops and changes of direction insure that the players remain in top physical condition.

Mr. Bert Keats coached the varsity team to a 16-14-3 league record, and then to the capturing of the Founders Cup playoff. Goalies Rob Kidwell and Tom Brown came up with many key saves on defense, while the high scoring of Will Volkmann, Lloyd Bunting, and Charlie Moderwell provided the offensive punch. Many experienced juniors including Captain Eric Sommers as well as some promising junior varsity players guarantee a favorable future for the team.

'A touch of class'

AMIDST CLATTERING steel blades, the Varsity fencing squad jousted its way through a competitive schedule, finishing with a record of 2-8. Under the direction of Coach John Mulliner, the young team, led by junior Mike Pacini, senior Claude Kalter, and sophomore Ben Van Amerongon, finished in fourth place in the state meet. Pacini, who took second place in the epee division, also participated in the Junior Olympics, earning an 18th place finish, a remarkable feat for a high school junior.

The Freshman-sophomore team gained invaluable experience during the year, which, along with the returning underclassmen, indicates a bright future for New Trier's fencing teams.

WITHOUT CHEERLEADERS, without a band, and without the spirited support given to boys' sports, the Girls' basketball team recovered from a shaky start and bounded back into contention. Rallying behind seniors Ann Becker and Nancy Rebarchak, the team settled into a strong offensive and defensive combination. By the end of the season, the team was playing solid basketball. Their overall performance prompted Coach Gerry Ryberg to be optimistic about their chances in next year's first state tournament.

Netted tweet

SPARKED WITH ENTHUSIASM after a successful finish at the New Trier West invitational meet, the Girls' badminton team got psyched for the season. Varsity singles star Beth Kincaid, one of the state's best, along with doubles sensations Ingrid Miller and Lisa Marder, helped to lead their team to a triumphant 5-1 midseason record. With twice as many girls as last year trying out, the incredible record netted by this year's squad, and the growing popularity of the sport, Coach Lee Kennicke was optimistic. She expressed confidence in the potential of her team, which she believed would fare well in the first state tournament, scheduled for 1977.

Swing set

SOOTHING THE HURT of earlier defeats, the Girls' gymnastics team rose to success later in the season. Through examples of precision, grace and poise, Co-captains Annie Lin and Marietta Mackevich encouraged their teammates. All-around gymnast Ellen Socket skillfully contributed the finishing touches to the varsity effort. Marcy Andrews on the uneven bars and Jennifer Baer on the sidehorse illustrated the skills that bolstered the team scores.

Arduous practice preceded deserved success for the junior varsity. The first half of the season, stained by only one loss to New Trier West, promised great hopes for next year's team, who will participate in the first year of statewide competition.

The golden spike

WITH A DETERMINATION befitting their reputation, the Girls' volleyball team fought to preserve their state championship title. Although Captain Ingrid Miller and star Lauren Goebel displayed great poise and dexterity, the team confronted formidable competition, preventing a repeat of last year's sensational performance.

In the scramble for victories, the team clambered to first place in district competition. Coaches Bonnie Beach and Lee Kennicke gave direction to the tenacious team, which developed into a well-rounded squad. Although plagued by inconsistency, the team's effort was fundamentally sound.

DETERMINATION, constant improvement, hard work: the components of a winning team, according to Head coach Ben Almaguer, successfully combined to make New Trier's track team a winner. The Indians, who placed second in the Central suburban league meet behind Evanston, boasted an undefeated record in indoor dual meets. Not only did the team excel as a whole, but many fine performances were turned in by individuals. Jeff King set new home indoor records in the 300 yd. run and triple jump.

One of the highlights of the season was the 12-team Morton West Invitational, where New Trier reigned supreme for the second consecutive year. Sophomore Joe Brennan's first place finish in the 60 yd. low hurdles tied the meet record and won him the trophy for most valuable athlete, an award that was presented to middle-distance runner Shaun Trenholm last year. Defending champs at the Wildcat Relays, the Indians triumphed again. Under the leadership of co-captains King and Sam Detmer, the team optimistically awaited the outdoor season and relay competition downstate in May.

GREAT EFFORT and a few surprises characterized the Varsity baseball team's 1975 summer season. Unexpectedly superb hitting by underclassmen Jeff Nielsen (.319) and David Cook (.297) raised high hopes for the upcoming spring. The second surprise took the form of the unfortunate absence of senior Will Volkmann, whose strong pitching and field play, as Coach Ron Klein noted, might have added three to four wins onto the season record of 10-9-2.

The early spring season was paced by the consistent play of returning lettermen Volkmann, John Drweiga, Scott Fisher, co-captains Drew Pitt and Tom Brown, and Rick McIntyre. McIntyre, who started behind the plate as a junior, was one of the few returning regulars. Combining a powerful bat with a tough defense, he added strength to an outstanding Indian attack. In overview, Klein summarized his team best as "just a heck of a good bunch of guys."

According to Coach Hal Severns, the Sophomore squad displayed the most versatility that he has seen in the last few years. He, along with the Freshman coach Wes Baumann, worked to prepare their players for hopeful varsity status.

Return to sender

DEDICATION AND determination marked the beginning of the 1976 tennis season. Relying on returning varsity strength and an abundance of underclass talent, Coach Hughes Davis foresaw a year of success and individual achievement.

The varsity retained much of last year's prowess with the return of a number of experienced players. Anchored by senior Bill Kerr and sophomore Bob Frei, the team once again showed the form which enabled them to capture second place in the state for both 1974 and 1975. The varsity also found added power in the outstanding performances of Craig Lee, Neil Golden, and Gregg Harris, all underclassmen.

Standouts Peter Horwitch and Jeff Holland provided the Frosh-Soph squad with the extra boost needed for a strong season. The broad base of talent found in the frosh-soph division combined with the experience of the Varsity and Junior Varsity teams promised an excellent year in 1976 and in years to come.

New Trier placed second in the Arlington prep meet, second in the Maine South invitational, and second in Arlington invitational.

Rocking the cradle

LACROSSE, an ancient yet relatively obscure game, flung its rough and tumble style across the playing field with newly found popularity. The upswing in participation was paralleled by greater turnouts of avid fans.

Coach Jim McFadzean's hopes for a powerful team centered around attackmen Lloyd Bunting and John Edwards and midfield standouts Scott Harrison and Rich Weiss. The team, consisting mostly of juniors, worked on building a new defense with prospects John Marquardt and Rick Houpt as its core.

A large turnout and no cuts gave the Sophomore team, coached by Mr. Bill Fly, great depth to draw upon, as they looked toward an exciting season.

Wings on their heels

ADVANCED COACHING techniques, greater use of facilities, and increased participation resulted in stiffer competition, as girls gained their rightful recognition in the realm of sports. At New Trier, these factors had gratifying effects. Last year's Girls' track team sent six members to state competition, and this year's new head coach, Miss Jaci Boyle, hoped to send more. With the growing support of girls' sports, the four-year-old team not only ran in a highly competitive league, but also participated in its first invitational meet at Waukegan West.

Gems of the diamond

IN ACCORDANCE with the ISHA plan, the Girls' softball team participated in the first state tournament. Coach Darlene Kluka, in anticipation of this season, predicted: "I believe we're going to have a lot of good pitchers and catchers, and with the number of girls who have JV experience, we should do quite well."

New IMage

OVER THE SUMMER, boys' intramural sports and Girls' athletic association merged. The unification was partly due to the enactment of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare's bill, Title 9, which prohibits discrimination in scholastic athletics. However, an effort to help run the co-educational sports program more efficiently was the primary reason for the merger. Although at first apprehensive, co-student directors Mark Abbey and Laurie Cragg worked as a team to make this year one of IM's finest.

The enthusiastic directors, with the help of Sponsor Wayne Wiemer, built a fine staff. Board members got directly involved with the student body, encouraging all students to participate in some activity that IM sponsored. This resulted in greater participation than in past years.

ALONG with its reorganization, IM changed its location by moving to the new gym facility. After three years of shuttling to various elementary schools in the district for IM and GAA sporting events, IM eagerly transferred to the IM gym, where all indoor games were played. In addition, students enjoyed a recreation room with pool, ping pong, air hockey, and shuffleboard that was open throughout the entire school day.

Yet, the merger of IM and GAA overshadowed all other developments. What had once been two, competitive organizations became one, progressive unit.

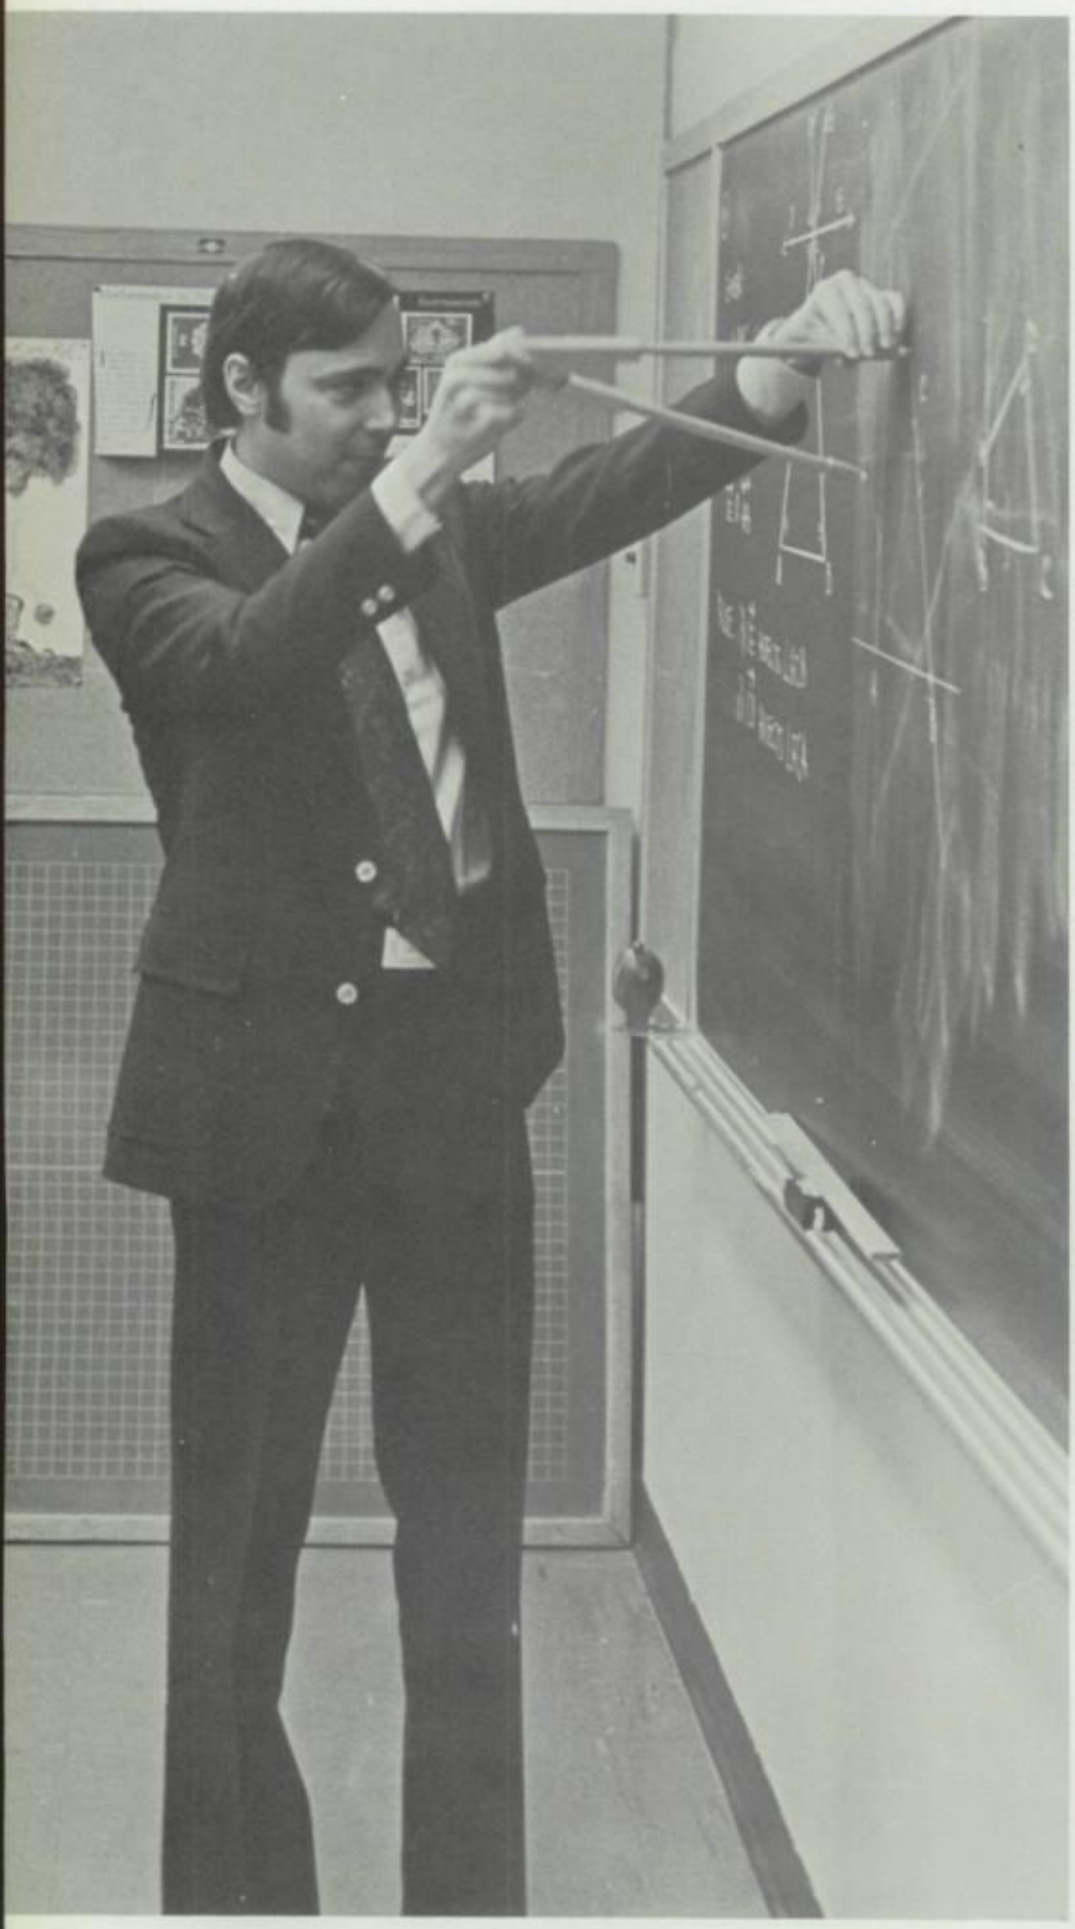
Faculty



Mr. Murphy acutely constructs a geometry problem. (Mengel)

Above: Mr. Wedekind attests to the theory that it is better to give than to receive. Below: With looks of worry and frustration written upon their faces, Dr. Bickert and Dr. Slocum try to draw up a solution to the problems facing the Board of education. (Padgitt, Woods)

A brick wall would be better, but for study hall a briefcase must suffice for Mr. Burnside. (Doughty)

Making the grade

WITH 1493 BUTTONS decorating the lapels of faculty, students, administrators, and community members, the entire New Trier district bonded together to fight Governor Walker's veto of SB 1493. The efforts of the lobbyists failed to eliminate the tax rollback that caused such severe damage to the school. Working without a contract, paid by last year's salary scale, and enduring long, drawn out negotiations, the faculty faced one of its most frustrating years. As if the contract dispute weren't enough, teachers found themselves with overloaded advisories, study halls, and classes, creating pressure and frustration for both students and faculty.

New Trier regretted the retirement of faculty members Mr. David Gustafson, director of Operating services; Mr. Philip McDowell, teacher of German; and Mrs. Geraldine Clader, teacher of English.

JUNIORS

CHANGE FROM the patterns of previous years is difficult and discouraging, if not impossible. With two years behind them, many juniors decided that New Trier and the New Trier experience held little for them, and consequently Steering committee was faced with the problem of finding the participation and enthusiasm to make its projects successful. They settled down to work, however, and their initial determination snowballed as more and more juniors became involved. Successful sales of candy and other fund raisers meant money for needed equipment at Henroten hospital, the Junior class beneficiary. These efforts, along with a successful prom, turnabout and revitalized East-West dance, capped off the year with a sense of fulfillment as juniors found the momentum to carry them through New Trier next year.

SPIRIT WAS THE CRY of the Sophomore class as they crowded themselves into the stands at all the school sporting events to cheer the New Trier teams on. An unusually lively class, the sophomores poured enthusiasm into everything they did. Spurred on by class President Jeff Holland, their efforts in a car wash, a special movie presentation to commemorate the Bicentennial, and a clothing drive to benefit needy families, were rewarded with success. Their vivacity carried over to their sponsorship of a party for new sophomore students, and an all school party with five bands. No longer daunted by New Trier, the sophomores forged ahead and left their mark on the school.

FRESHMEN

FRESHMAN. Stumbling into this huge mass of green tiles and beige lockers is an experience not to be forgotten. Familiar faces seem to have disappeared, leaving in their places an unrecognizable mass of strangers. For the first few weeks the only haven is advisory, where the adviser knows your name, wrestles with your schedule, and introduces you to New Trier.

Freshman advisory played an integral part in a newcomer's life at school. It was the first "team" encountered; it was involved in IM sports, charity drives, contests, and projects. Class officers and Student council began a re-evaluation of the rights and responsibilities program which was followed through in the advisories. Early morning discussions about grades, studying, and school clubs all helped integrate freshmen into the land of green and grey.

SENIORS

FOUR YEARS HAVE PASSED so quickly; it seems like only yesterday when the Class of '76 came stumbling through the doors of New Trier for the first time. The school is different now in many ways; the changes include the construction of the gym complex, the return of four quarters of p.e. and 8:15 advisory, a change in administration with the appointment of Dr. Roderick Bickert as superintendent, and a rapidly growing interest in girls' athletics.

The school has made an impression on the Class of '76, just as the class, with its spirit and dedication, has left its mark on New Trier. Mr. Harold Severns, senior boys' adviser chairman, observed that the seniors "have changed from the turbulent seniors of a few years past." He added that the Class of '76 was as hard working and constructive as any class he had seen during his six years as adviser chairman.

"Never thought this day would end. Just don't understand why my math teacher can't give tests on his own test day—I flunked it for sure . . . two more days until Friday—basketball game this weekend, but 'Jaws' is finally playing closer than Golf Mill. I could go to both if I leave all my homework for Sunday night. Wish they wouldn't have fire drills during lunch. If it only had been during the test. Social service needs posters for the rummage sale—guess I'll help tomorrow during a free period. Bob's birthday next week. English class was interesting, feel like I'm really learning something. Forgot to get tickets for the winter play—I'll get killed for getting such crummy seats—4:30 already—got to get home and start my homework."

Down in the basement there is a small room with blue walls and a yellow stripe running around it. If you walk past it almost any period of the day, you can hear faint clinks, thuds, and the sound of rushing water. Hidden deep inside, stumbling around in the dark, are the nine photographers who animated the pages of the yearbook.

With students' interests ranging from White's to skiing, the staff had to travel far and wide to capture the variety of pictures needed. The photo gallery, placed in the index this year, gives the ECHOES photographers a chance to display their freelance talent.
